

Can Investments be a bottomless pits or reach a valuation ceiling?

by mohammed Lodhi hussain

I think if either occurs re-evaluate and see whether one needs change and whether one can bear a bear markets tolerating the highs and lows or take a break.

It is foolhardy to predict the future let alone the next day.

Investing is best when its slow and steady like the tortoise and hare from Aesop's Fables. Whereas, a hare can outpace and grin over its ability. The tortoise just puts one foot after the other. Over time, it is the diligent, disciplined and deferring short term gains for long term compounding interest and avoiding long term pains.

Motto: we all start at the same starting point. However, the secret to success for me is to take it one moment, second, day or timetable at a time. Success is not a destination. It is the Journey. It is the value you bring to your loved ones and the habitat and world in which we live. So, for me, success is the path and the Way. Not the goal. Because reaching goals can be unforgiving. Either you reach them and ask... "Now what?" or You seek out higher goals. Those new goals must continue to challenge, cheer and capture you heart, soul, body and mind.

Otherwise, it is a hollow victory. And you change or disdain what kind of person you have become.

I have worked through those feelings a long time ago. Still they pop up on the inside. From a memento, thought, casual conversations with colleagues and close ones.

It truly is an epidemic that is the root of all social epidemics. The feeling that you lack LOVE. Yet I learned that Love comes from the inside first. One must guard one's heart at the same time take a leap of faith for falling in love.

I did not plan to rant on...

Thank you.

I hope this helps.

Sincerely,

Mohammed Lodhi Hussain

Editor, sundays7pm.com

Lead Designer, fanslovebands.com

P.S. Thanks for all the people, I know, or meet in the future, or have passed on and are looking gleefully down on us. I miss you.

P.S.S., I Love all creatures great and small. And maybe we can all do a kind gesture for it. Like with our language, skills or kindheartedness. Let's raise a generation of Overachievers in the integrity, humility and generosity department of our lives. Let the record show. USA is number one in helping the world. Thank you.

email advice or ideas for new topics and talking points for future editions. Thank you.

molodhi1234567890@gmail.com